Editor's Introduction  Craig J. Hazen  251

Symposium on God and Abstract Objects

The Problem of God and Abstract Objects:  Paul Gould  255
A Prolegomenon

God and Propositions  Keith Yandell  275

God and the Platonic Horde:  Richard Davis  289
A Defense of Limited Conceptualism

A Nominalist Perspective on God and Abstract Objects  William Lane Craig  305

Articles

The Lord of Noncontradiction:  James N. Anderson and Greg Welty  321
An Argument for God from Logic

Natural Theology’s Case for Jesus’s Resurrection:  Hugh G. Gauch, Jr.  339
Methodological and Statistical Considerations

The Sacrament of Punishment:  Kent Dunnington  357
A Response to David Boonin’s Abolitionism

Tooley, Plantinga, and the Deontological Argument from Evil

The Epistemological Objection to Divine Command Ethics  Glenn Peoples  389

Notes

On Free Will and Soul Making:  James S. Spiegel  405
Complementary Approaches to the Problem of Evil

Against a Naturalistic Causal Account of Reality:  Stephen Parrish  415
A Response to Graham Oppy

How Personal Agents Are Located in Space: Implications for Worship, Eucharist, and Union with Christ  John Jefferson Davis  437

Irrealism, Ontological Pluralism, and the Trinity: A Reply to Efird on Make/Believing the World(s)  Mark S. McLeod-Harrison  445
How Much Evidence to Justify Religious Conversion? Some Thoughts on Burden and Standard of Proof vis-à-vis Christian Commitment

BOOK REVIEWS

Robert C. Koons and George Bealer, eds., The Waning of Materialism
JOSEPH GOTTLIEB 463

Robert Cummings Neville, Realism in Religion: A Pragmatist’s Perspective
SAMUEL J. YOUNGS 468

Paul K. Moser, The Elusive God: Reorienting Religious Epistemology
R. DOUGLAS GEIVETT 474

Mary Leng, Mathematics and Reality
WILLIAM LANE CRAIG 479

NEWS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS 487
Editor’s Introduction

This issue of Philosophia Christi should be a reminder to Christians of every stripe why believers need to do philosophy. There are some deep and abiding questions we need to answer correctly because there is a lot at stake—such as clear thinking on the very nature of God, love, justice, and logic. This journal issue is devoted to moving closer to an answer on an ages-old philosophical question about the nature of abstract objects. If this is new turf for you (as it was for me) you’ll be delighted by the way Paul Gould, our guest editor for this print symposium, has introduced the topic. You’ll also be delighted by the contributions on several different sides of the question that he has assembled. We are very grateful to Paul for his excellent work.

In addition to our special symposium, we have a range of very stimulating articles, notes, and reviews. Hugh Gauch of Cornell University has an essay herein on “Natural Theology’s Case for Jesus’s Resurrection.” I mention this because it is an example of “ramified” natural theology to which we shall be devoting a special issue of the journal in the very near future. EPS members Angus Menuge, Charles Taliaferro, Tim McGrew, Hugh Gauch, and Lydia McGrew have been working with Richard Swinburne on an article that frames the issues and a call for papers on this emerging topic. Watch your e-mail in-boxes or check our website (www.epsociety.org) in early 2012 for more information.

A blessed 2012 to you all.

Craig J. Hazen
Biola University